East Boston, MA

With over 16 years of experience in the construction industry, Libby serves as Project Executive at Suffolk. A founding member of Suffolk's national Women Who Build Employee Resource Group, she provides invaluable mentorship and professional development opportunities to nearly 200 women in Suffolk's Northeast region. Prior to this, Libby managed complex construction projects for numerous academic and life sciences including projects at the John W. Olver Design Building at UMass Amherst, Boston College, and Cambridge's Kendall Square. She is enthusiastic about getting girls and young women into STEM fields, something near and dear to her as a Girl Scout alum. She is involved with Suffolk's Rebuild the Ratio initiative, providing mentorship and accentuating representation of women in construction. In this capacity, Libby led a group of women to build a curriculum for the Juniors Who Build patch, helping Girl Scouts learn about job opportunities in the construction industry. She also hosts educational and volunteer initiatives ranging from career days and hard hat tours for students, local food drives, and extracurricular activities for special needs students. She serves on the Regional Committee of Suffolk's employee run charity, The Giving Circle, and partners with Wonderfund during the holiday season as a part of Suffolk's Giving Tree. Libby is an active member of Boston's Professional Women in Construction. She received her Bachelor of Science in Civil Engineering from University of New Hampshire.
